Want to run for council?

Be prepared to commit the next four years of your life

JENNIFER WILSON
Staff Reporter

The next batch of councillors elected in Haliburton County will rule the municipality's political roost one year longer than their predecessors, thanks to the provincial government's initiative to change the term length of all Ontario councils from three to four years.

Reaction to the recent change among several of the county's more veteran politicians has been hot and cold.

"I can understand the cities having four-year terms because, for the majority of them, being a councillor is their full-time job," says Bill Howe, deputy-reeve for Highlands East. "But for most council members here, that's just not the reality. Being in council is something that, unless you're retired, isn't your only job."

The lengthening of the council term was mandated by the province's Ministry of Municipal Affairs and Housing last month. The change is intended to create a province-wide standard for all councils while giving municipal governments more time to complete projects they started when first elected.

"A four-year term offers more time for a council or school board to forge an agenda, implement it, and then seek the people's judgment," says John Gerretsen, Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing, in a press release.

"In addition, municipal councils and school boards would have similar time horizons to those of federal and provincial governments in which to plan for the community and implement those plans."

However, for Bill Davis, deputy reeve of Dysart et al., the additional year will do very little but give the county a big headache.

"I didn't support it from the beginning," says Davis. "I think it will become fairly costly to municipalities because I think a lot of people who decide to run for council may get disillusioned and quit. At that point, a by-election needs to be called, and that's where it can get pretty costly."

Davis says the idea of making council the same length for all municipal governments is unnecessary. "It's just a different situation altogether when it comes to council in a smaller area," says Davis. "It might work in bigger areas but I'm not so sure about here."

Visitors to Head Lake Park this past weekend may have noticed a new addition to the landscape, as several hundred metres of rope now silhouette the shoreline.

The new barrier is part of an ongoing revitalization project by Haliburton's Rotary Club. The group hopes to make the area more accommodating to visitors by controlling the quantity of geese (and goose waste) littering the park's paths, lawns, and beaches.

Local Rotarian John Beachli helped to organize the effort, which he stressed is not an attempt to run the birds out of town.

"We're certainly not trying to circumvent their way of life here. We just want a place for our children to play without slipping and sliding," he said.

Four-year council term a big commitment

Howe agrees with Davis and worries that, with council in need of some fresh blood, the extra year may deter potential candidates from filing their nomination. "I think four years is a bit long and quite a commitment," says Howe. "I'm not sure if the younger people are going to go for it."

However, for Reeve Keith Tallman of Highlands East, says, "I think it really will depend on what kind of a council we have in," says Tallman. "If we have one that's working well, which I'm sure we will, then what's wrong with four years?"

For Donna Graham, a current Highlands East councillor who's planning to run in November's election, four years is a "bit long."

"When I made my decision to run again, it was still up in the air if there was going to be a switch to four years. But I made my decision and love what I do, so I'm sticking with it."

So far, the one-year extension of council's commitment to the municipality hasn't seemed to dissuade potential candidates from running. Already, eight people have declared their candidacy for Highlands East, something clerk Irene Cook says is "quite a fair number for the election so far."

Candidates include Dave Burton and Glen Madill for reeve, Jim Mackie and Bill Foot in Ward 1, Suzanne Partridge and Charles Irvine in Ward 2, Chuck Viner and Donna Graham in Ward 3, and Gary Stoughton in Ward 4.

Gooderham salutes its pioneers July 1

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

At the dawn of the new confederation of Canada in 1867, William Maxwell awoke with a disquieting sense of homelessness.

When he had immigrated from Scotland, he thought he was settling in the British colony of Lower Canada. But confederation changed that, or at least it changed his sense of it.

"William suddenly found himself living in Quebec," his great-grandson Robert Maxwell recounts. "The official language was to be French and the religion was going to be Catholic – and him a good Orangeman!"

And so, at the age of 78, William Maxwell wrote to the government in Ottawa to ask where good land was to be had in an English-speaking area of this young country. In response he was given a Queen's grant to some land in a pioneer community called Irondale.

Accompanied by a son and daughter, William once again set out to make a new life for himself, only this time in Ontario.

"The fact is that these people came to an unknown area," Robert Maxwell says of what he sees as the heroism of his ancestors, and others like them. "The only thing they had going for them was a tremendous ability to withstand hard work and hardships."

On July 1, 2006, Robert Maxwell is going to pay tribute to the first settlers of Glamorgan Township by presenting their descendents, and the people who keep their history alive, with a Beaver Medal. The Canada Day Salute to the Pioneers in Gooderham is going to be a celebration of the area's rich history but also a communal family reunion.

The first Beaver Medal was awarded in 1963. Robert Maxwell was not only the first recipient but he is now, in effect, the guardian of those medals not yet awarded.

The medal was struck from a copper fitting taken from the SS Beaver, the first steam vessel in the Northwest Pacific. Built in 1835, she too had a rich and proud history. To get to Vancouver from the shipyards of England, she had a 225-day journey by sail across the Atlantic and through the treacherous waters of Cape Horn. Her first taskmaster was the Hudson's Bay Company, whose governor George Simpson had her retrofitted with a new steam engine. In 1843, she carried the founders of Victoria to Vancouver Island. Six years later she went looking for gold in California and just short of a decade later, came back north for the Fraser River gold rush. Her sailing days came to an end when she got caught up in an eddy on Siwash Rock near what is today Stanley Park on July 26, 1888.

Robert Maxwell was part of a committee that wanted to honour both the history of the Beaver and the people who dedicated their lives to the waters in which she had served. The Beaver Medal was struck for those who were selected "not for bravery in battle, or heroic efforts on the battle front, but for the contribution they have and continue to make, to the county and to community. They are recognized for their personal leadership, sharing their personal talent, providing enjoyment to others, research for better living conditions and, above all else, being the silent role model for all to follow."

The first medals were given to people with ties to the merchant marines, the unsung "underdogs" of World War II who risked their lives to ensure that Britain was kept well-stocked with supplies of food, and men. Then the medals were given to those in the navy, and armed forces.

Over the years, Maxwell became the sole custodian of the remaining medals and in 1999 he decided to extend the scope of contributions the medal would honour. No longer did the recipient have to have a tie to the sea. Instead, recipients would include people who either represented the past or kept the past alive in the present.

"I want to issue them all before I go," he said in a telephone interview from his home near Penticton, British Columbia.

On Canada Day at least 37 medals will be presented to the descendents of people who sacrificed and struggled to make a life out of the bush land around Gooderham. Local historian Elva Bates, who will be one of the recipients, is spearheading the organization of the celebration. The day will start with the local children, flags in hand, leading a parade of the recipients to the community centre where Maxwell, wearing a kilt in honour of his family's original roots in Scotland, will preside over the festivities.

Bates is writing a book called A Journey Through Gooderham's Past and a companion novel of the same name. (The novel, she says, is "where I can bring in some of the stories I've heard but can't print.")

In doing her research, Bates has collected the genealogy of 30 local families, many of whom will be represented that day. These genealogies will be on display so that people can climb the branches of the family trees that were planted in Glamorgan.

"It will give the community a sense of history and Canada Day," she says.

Robert Maxwell can't wait to be there. He is the grandson of John Maxwell, who accompanied his father William in the trek from Lower Canada to what was to become known as Maxwell's Crossing. John Maxwell and his wife Sarah Jane had 12 children, including Robert's father, Stanley. The Maxwells lived in the area's first frame house and Maxwell's Crossing, a whistle stop on the I.B.&O. was named after them. John, who was the township's reeve for a while, was also quite the entrepreneur. He owned the Union Hotel but it was when he was delivering a pay packet for the lumbermen who were working at the Boyd lumber camp on Bark Lake that he drowned in his early forties.

When his grandson Robert was a boy, Robert didn't want to play with the other children at family gatherings. "I'd hang back and listen to what [the adults] were talking about. I was getting an oral history; all of the stories they had to tell."

Those early days in Glamorgan were rough ones. There was no farming to speak of – unless you knew how to make money from the endless crops of rocks – and the forests became the main source of livelihood. It was as an adult that Robert began to appreciate just how strong and determined those early settlers had to be, and how those traits had been passed down to him.

"No matter how tough things were, we could cope because our parents had coped and our grandparents had survived," he says. "People under duress build an inner strength that you pass on from generation to generation."

Today, at the age of 70, it is Robert who wants to pass on some of the things he's learned, as well as his knowledge of the past. He may live in British Columbia but he knows that Gooderham is his true home.

If you go to the cemetery in the middle of the village, you'll see his parents' tombstones. Next to them you'll also see a black stone with his name carved on it. The date is missing – and he hopes it won't be carved for many years to come – but the sense of belonging is there as silent testimony to the land and the people who made him what he is.

Since he's not quite ready for that final visit, on Canada Day he will instead make the pilgrimage to Black Lake where his uncle, Joseph Smith, used to "serenade" his neighbours and the surrounding forests with the lonely drone of the bagpipes.

"Every time I go back to Gooderham, I climb up the steep little hill on Black Lake where Joseph Smith would play," he says. "I stand there and think, 'One of my ancestors disturbed this quiet little neighbourhood...'"

Christian group opens pregnancy care centre in Haliburton

GREG HOEKSTRA

Staff Reporter

After three years of planning and preparation, the Highlands Community Pregnancy Care Centre officially opened its doors this past weekend in downtown Haliburton.

The centre, which is housed in the lower level of the Stedmans Mall, aims to give one-on-one support to pregnant women and their families, with a particular focus on those caught in a crisis or unexpected pregnancy situation. Education is the centre's primary objective, says executive director Julie Goodwin.

"We're here for [the client], regardless of what decision she makes," says Goodwin. "But we do want to make sure she understands all of her options, so that when she does make a decision she has been well informed."

Prior to the new facility, the closest pregnancy care centre for Haliburton residents was in Bancroft, a town with the highest teen pregnancy rate in the province. Though the situation may not be as drastic in Haliburton, Goodwin says, there is definitely a need for a care centre in the community.

In addition to crisis support, the centre also offers information regarding sexually transmitted diseases, assistance in obtaining maternity and baby clothing, free pregnancy testing, and post-abortion support counselling.

Since the centre is affiliated with the Christian Association of Pregnancy Support Services (CAPSS), their stance on abortion falls in line with church doctrine.

"We are definitely pro-life and believe in the sanctity of life," says Judy Tomlinson-Ross, chair of the centre's board of directors.

Goodwin says that if a client considering abortion were to walk through the door, the first step would be to ensure that she had information available about all of her options.

"I think that often time when people are considering abortion they don't have information, so we would ask her exactly what she knew about," says Goodwin.

However, Goodwin also notes that their mission is not to get involved politically, nor to push their beliefs upon clients who may visit the centre.

"We will not be doing anything like scare tactics... It is a traumatic enough time when someone perceives something as a crisis, so our only goal is to provide support."

The centre is currently fully operational, with six fully-trained volunteers and another six set to be trained in the upcoming weeks.

For more information contact the Highlands Community Pregnancy Care Centre at 457-HOPE, or stop by their office at 187 Highland Street in Haliburton.

outlet for the deep sadness that comes with loss as well as a celebration of a life well lived.

Funerals are also one of the few times when all the disparate facets of person's life come together: family, work, friends, people whose only bond is the person they've come to say goodbye to.

It's a daunting task to try to sum up a person's life at a funeral, especially when the ache of loss is so raw. But it's also a sobering experience for those sitting in the rows of chairs listening to the eulogies. All of the tributes raise the question: what will they say of me.

Paul Charron's funeral on Friday was not only a testament to his life but also a reminder that the simplest things can have the greatest importance, proving yet again that funerals are as much for the living as they are for the dead.

A retired Hydro worker he was best known here as a handyman. He spent his days doing small chores of little consequence in the grand scheme of things. But what made him special, what made him mourned, was that his primary goal in life was to make other people smile. He always had a joke to tell. (There was something oddly delightful in the fact that the joke that was read at the funeral could not be reprinted in this newspaper because it was a play on words – or rather, a certain four-letter word that rhymes with bit. Four letter words are part of our lives; why shouldn't they be part of our deaths?)

But John Bell had the best story of all to tell, the one with the most resonance, because while it had a happy ending it also had, at its root, the most tragedy.

Bell is a Maple Lake cottager who had often hired Paul to do odd jobs. He also has a 16-year-old son who was discovered to have a pack of cigarettes in his knapsack on the weekend that Paul came for his last visit.

By this time Paul's health was deteriorating quickly. A lifetime smoker, he had just been diagnosed with lung cancer. The ravages taking place inside his body were most evident on the outside by his rapid weight loss. Almost overnight he'd become a shadow of his former self.

The visit was as light-hearted as usual, with Paul sharing his jokes and his Wurther's. But, as he left, Paul stopped and looked the 16-year-old in the eye. Look at me, he said. I am dying because I am a smoker. This is what could happen to you, too.

A few days later, the teen handed the cigarette pack to his parents. He wouldn't be needing it any more.

Who knows. The teen could have been one of the many people who dabbled with cigarettes and then quit before much harm was done to his body. But he also could have been one of those people who, once addicted, finds it almost impossible to quit. As one of his final gestures, Paul Charron took that risk away.

It's not really that small, it's shrinkage!

YESTERDAY I WAS FISHING for lake trout with a friend when we began to discuss the fickle nature of fish. The conversation began when I hooked a lake trout that pretty well made my trolling rod double over. Immediately I proclaimed the fish to be about six pounds. My fishing buddy quickly called it seven, and this, in no small part, is why he is currently my best fishing buddy.

It was about this time, however, that the fluctuating nature of fish entered into play. Several times during the epic battle, the fish took on proportions of eight and, I recall, even ten pounds. Unfortunately, when we finally landed the trout, his weight had already reduced to a paltry five pounds - I suspect in no small part due to the fact that fish, like humans, are made up of a high percentage of water and the sun was such that severe evaporation was a very real concern. And let's also remember that he came out of very cold water, which, as any man knows, contributes a significant shrinkage factor to the equation.

Even so, a lake trout of five pounds still requires a photo. But when I got my digital camera out and took a picture of it, a very strange thing happened - the fish turned out to be camera shy. A regular shrinking violet she was, which, I suppose, is why she contracted her molecules so that she appeared to be only slightly over four pounds. This sort of optical illusion happens more often than you think.

By the time I got that fish home for dinner, it had stabilized at just a touch over four pounds. Which is a shame because, in its original state it would have fed several more people - at some points, I dare say, an entire wedding party.

Unfortunately, the humidity was changing and a storm front was rapidly approaching.

Because of this, I told my wife that we'd need to eat this one pronto. I didn't want to take the risk of having the fish shrink in size once again just before cooking. My kids, after all, love eating fresh fish, and are not at all averse to seconds.

Many non-anglers might believe the fluctuating nature of fish to be a rare phenomenon but it happened twice more in the same outing: the next time with a five-pound laker that finally settled in at three and, most notably, with the one that I hooked that my buddy lost while handling the net.

That one was of particular interest since it actually gained poundage, even as we watched it swim off into the murky depths. At last sight it appeared to be approximately one hundred and twenty-eight pounds. But now, on sober second thought, I figure we got excited and I wouldn't swear it was an ounce over seventy-five. With this in mind, both my buddy and I are actually happy that we didn't have to boat it in our canoe. It might have swamped us.

I suppose we'll never really know what that fish would have finally weighed since it was destabilizing wildly even as he was thrashing at the rim of the net. But my buddy, perhaps sensing my disappointment, particularly after I pinged him in the head with a one-ounce sinker, was forced to agree that it was the biggest fish either of us had never seen. And he promised to support this statement each time I tell the fishing story.

The sad part is that we have only enough facts to speculate wildly on the high side. That's the problem with the fluctuating nature of fish.

The Great Dump Escape

WHEN ED DECIDED that he needed a dog, he had no idea what he was getting himself into. He had been tossing the idea of a dog around in his head for months. Then he met Ruby and there was no other decision possible than to take her home. Her current owners wanted to get rid of her and, as far as Ed could see, the only thing wrong with Ruby was that she had more love to give than her owners could take. So Ed took her instead.

From the start she was a handful. She vacillated between acting like his body patch and running through the bush totally deaf to his calls. Her coat was smooth and glossy, thanks to a good diet, yet she would steal food off the table or kitchen counter if left within reach. Ruby knew this was not allowed but couldn't seem to help herself. Yet she wanted so much to please Ed. She looked at him with her big soft eyes, leaning her whole body into his as he sat trying to read. When he left her at home, she pined for him mercilessly. And when he returned he was welcomed better than a high roller in Las Vegas.

In fact it was because Ruby so loved to accompany Ed anywhere and everywhere that she was in his station wagon that particular day. It was a hot one and Ruby was travelling around town, her head out the wagon's opened window. When they got to the dump, Ed wanted to unload as quickly as possible and get out. He hated the dump; hated the filth and stench. A trip to the dump was a necessary evil to be endured for as short a time as possible.

As Ed was wrestling with an uncooperative mass of plastic bottles and jars Ruby took off. Over the back seat she lunged, dragging her leash along with her as she bumped past the recyclables and by Ed with nary a glance. He stood there for a second, mouth agape, not believing what had just happened. Ruby's tail was disappearing over the mountain of shiny garbage bags and miscellaneous gunk lying in pools and piles everywhere. Ed felt ill.

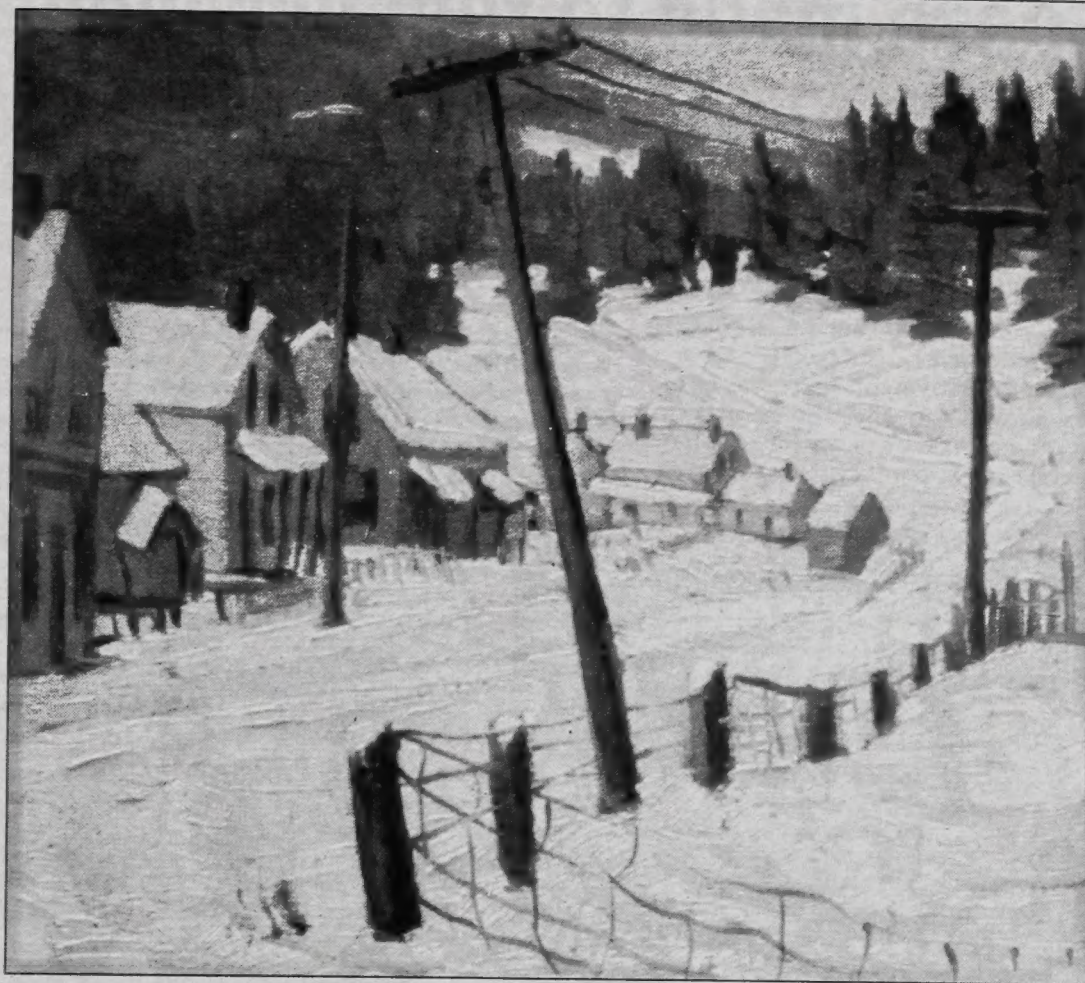

Of course he called her back but she blissfully ignored him. This was heaven for Ruby. The smells were intoxicating and there was also a heady selection of exposed items waiting to be tasted. As for Ed, the first thing he thought of as he saw Ruby's rapidly shrinking form was bears. The second thing he thought of was he had to somehow catch her or she was a goner one way or another. If she got lost she'd never find her way home but she'd probably never make it out of the dump in one piece. If the bears didn't get her, something she ate or stepped on inevitably would. Not to mention the highway nearby.

And so it was with a desperate and sinking heart that Ed ran directly into the smelliest, freshest and most foul part of the dump in pursuit of his dog. He scrambled over bulky, plastic-hidden bundles, skirting bottle shards and barbed wire. He descended through dark, oily-looking slicks that slithered under his feet and did not invite a closer look. It took all his resolve to focus only on the retreating form ahead, the white-tipped tail darting about like a child let loose in a candy factory. Here and there Ruby stopped to wolf down a lump here, a morsel there before continuing on. It was Ed's fervent hope to catch her at one of these stops.

He was making headway as Ruby's insatiable appetite worked against her progress. Then his chance came when she lingered over an especially pungent garbage bag ripped open and feeding a motley crew of gulls. Ed lunged forward, slipping on something inevitably slimy but still managing to grab the end of Ruby's leash and to hang on. The leash's looped hand piece was wet and smelled terrible, no doubt a prelude to the state of Ruby herself. But he had her.

Ed was convinced a bear lurked behind every mound of plastic bags. It was only crazy luck that had kept them safe so far. And so with a constant lookout, he dragged Ruby all the way back over the stinking, appalling terrain they had just travelled. Now that she realized her romp was over, she hung her head and tried to make her tail disappear into her back haunches. Ruby knew she was in trouble.

Fortunately Ed didn't have to lift her up. She jumped in as soon as he opened the back door, as though to make up for her bad behaviour. Trying not to breathe, Ed tied Ruby's leash to a door handle so she had to stay in the back of the wagon, as far away from him as possible. A bath would be the first stop for Ruby, from car to basement bath, before she could enter the rest of the house or be around people. He turned his head to give her one more angry glare before setting off. But she looked so pathetically sad and sorry, he couldn't stay angry. Despite it all, he didn't regret having her. It was just the smell he could do without.

pic of the past

This isn't quite a picture of the past but it does capture a time in Haliburton village's history. This is a painting of Pine Street by the late Ethel Curry, who grew up in Haliburton and was best friends with Doris McCarthy, who is now a Canadian icon. In honour of the 10th anniversary of the Ethel Curry Gallery, there is an exhibit of her work there. The celebration also includes an auction of one of her paintings, with proceeds going to the Haliburton Highlands Health Services Foundation.

letters to the editor

Youth - know your workplace rights

To the Editor:

Parents and students should know about some of the factors young people face during their summer or part-time jobs. Most students get taken advantage of because they're inexperienced and they don't ask questions. I want students to understand their rights and regulations. I want students to know their responsibilities at a workplace. I also want them to know proper work hours and pay. I'm here to help make sure everything is done promptly and safely.

Young workers between the ages 15 and 24 are injured on the job because of lack of experience. Common injuries are punctures and bruises, broken bones, burns and more. We need to stop these injuries by getting the proper information out.

As a young worker you have the right to know about all hazards in your workplace. If you feel endangered in any way you have the right to refuse unsafe work. You also have the right to participate in any curricular activities regarding safe workplace.

Young workers often become injured because of what they don't know. These are some examples to help you recognize, assess and control hazards in your workplace: physical, biological, chemical and ergonomic hazards. If these hazards are at your workplace, your employer should tell you what they are and the dangers of them.

For most employees, the maximum number of hours they can be required to work in a day is eight, unless the employer has established a regular workday longer than eight hours, and the maximum work week is 48 hours. This is important to remember especially when you're a young worker because some employers tend to ask you to stay longer or take double shifts.

As of February 1, 2006, minimum wage for students is $7.25 per hour. You are only a student if you're under 18 years of age and work 28 hours a week or less when school is in session. Students can work more than 28 hours a week during a school break or summer holidays. If you are over 18, or work more than 28 hours per week during the school year, you should be paid at least the adult minimum wage of $7.75 per hour.

I sincerely hope that you take this information into consideration because it will not only be a benefit when you get a job, but it will also be a guide to help you get treated with respect through your young working experience!

Geese made to feel unwelcome in Head Lake Park meant to make it inconvenient for geese to meander in and out of the park. If all goes according to plan, geese will opt to either stay in the water, or make landfall somewhere else.

"Geese have millions of acres to enjoy," said Beachli, "but we as human beings only have certain parks designated for our enjoyment. Our goal is to make the park a social place once again."

In addition to barriers, the Rotary Club has also employed a "Goosebusters" system that uses recorded sounds to ward off geese. The recordings are actual warning calls from a goose watchman, and are transmitted sequentially through five speakers hidden in the park.

"Geese have a sound that basically says 'Get out of here,' so this is using their own voice to speak to them and scare them off," said Beachli.

With monetary donations and the municipality's blessing, the Rotary Club has been able to spearhead a number of initiatives within the park. Later this summer they hope to open a new beach for local residents, as the former location is no longer usable. Once the temperature tops approximately 78° Fahrenheit, high levels of bacteria make the area unsafe.

Beachli says there are several theories as to what led to elevated bacteria levels at the former Rotary Beach. Some believe that because the beach is situated downhill from the road that warm, dirty water flows down from the streets and parking lots during heavy rainfall, creating a breeding ground for bacteria.

Others contend that following the flood caused by the Moss's Pond washout, the water currents, which used to cleanse the beach naturally, were altered. And above all else, many feel that the increase in geese, ducks, and seagulls ultimately led to the beach's demise. With any luck that won't be the case with the new beach, so long as people respect the Rotary Club's rope barriers

The Rotary Club is asking for the public's co-operation in maintaining the project. They are hopeful that people will refrain from damaging or dismantling the barrier and appreciate its purpose.

"We need people to understand what we are doing, and more importantly, why we are doing it. It's for the people. We want to give this all back to our kids."

HHSS student wins bronze on his last throw at OFSAA track meet

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

It was his last throw of the day and Matt Duchene made it count.

The Haliburton Highlands Secondary School student won a bronze medal in discus when he threw 46'27" in the all-Ontario track meet in Etobicoke on Saturday.

"It was nice to throw consistently at this meet, because I hadn't at other meets. I threw a personal best, which is hard at OFSAA," he says.

His teammates also did well in the prestigious competition which features some of Canada's future top athletes.

Rebecca Ide came seventh in the senior girls javelin, throwing in a downpour, and Brandi Reid came 10th out of 24 in the junior girls 80 metre hurdles.

All three achieved a personal best in their sport, which had been the team's goal when entering the competition.

"It's a really, really strong showing," says head coach Paul Morissette.

He says the young athletes handled the pressure very well and he also had praise for Matt's discus coach, teacher Walter Tose.

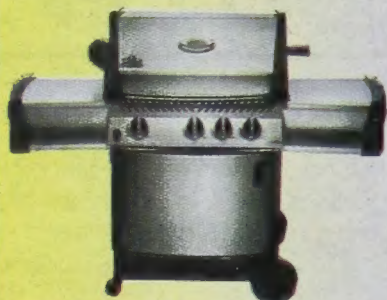

"I'm amazed that I came from being ranked 16th to place 7th. It was a great way to end my season, that's for sure," Rebecca says. "It helps having amazing coaches helping you through the entire season. All four of our track coaches are amazing."

Brandi says, "That was my best race from last year and this year. My overall time improved, so I'm pretty happy."

While Rebecca is graduating this year, both Matt and Brandi are returning to HHSS next year, which bodes well for the success of the track and field team.

Getting lost in the haze of Alzheimer's community news

harcourt

Valerie Smith
442-2840

Can you imagine forgetting who you are, where you are or how to get home? Can you imagine the faces of your loved ones becoming faces of strangers? Can you imagine watching as, one by one, all life's joys become forgotten and all the pleasures you loved and enjoyed drift out of your life? Have you ever forgotten where you are going or someone's name or where your glasses are?

This is the life that 70-year-old Marge Lewins of Harcourt faces each day. She is a victim of Alzheimer's, a disease that progressively affects nerve cells in parts of the brain involved in reasoning, memory, learning, language and judgement. At times Marge can be found looking at her loving husband and friend Ken suspiciously as she wonders who he is. This menace dominates her life and it is a disease that anyone has a chance to get. It could affect your parents, your wife or your husband.

Wandering is a common behaviour for victims suffering with Alzheimer's disease. They want to keep on the move and on Thursday, June 1 at approximately 7:00 p.m. Marge disappeared from her husband's ever watchful eyes. In her confused state she aimlessly took a walk in the nearby forest where she remained until approximately 1:20 a.m. Many local volunteers of the Highlands East fire rescue team under the direction of Chief Don Middleton combed the area looking for her until the police were called in. A multitude of police vehicles, including a special canine unit from the Bracebridge area, rolled in, filling the Harcourt Community Centre parking lot. Just as they were to be dispatched into the woods, they learned that Marge had been located not far from her home. She was anxious, confused, cold and insect bitten but very much alive. She was taken by ambulance to the hospital and is presently back home with family and friends.

Marge and Ken Lewins have resided in Harcourt since 1966. Ken, a millwright by trade, started the KM & K Welding business in 1981. Marge was always busy raising their 5 children and helping Ken. Last year they sold their business and moved to their present home in back of their former KM & K Welding business.

One of the police officers told us that there is a Safely Home Alzheimer Wandering Registry one can register with. It is not easy to remain calm and think clearly when a loved one has wandered; however, this network can help. Safely Home is a nation-wide program developed by the Alzheimer Society of Canada in partnership with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. The Alzheimer Society in partnership with SIRCH Community Services and Consulting work together to provide support services in Haliburton County. For more information please contact SIRCH Haliburton at 705 457-1742.

The officer also recommended that the person with Alzheimer's disease should wear a bright orange vest or jacket in order that they may be viewed by helicopter search and rescue teams.

It was also strongly suggested that anyone walking alone in the woods should also make a habit of wearing a bright orange vest or jacket. In the event of an injury that made it impossible to walk they would be visible from the air.

On Thursday, June 1, I attended the Trillium Lakelands Evening of Excellence where a number of teachers from Haliburton were recognized for their outstanding contributions to their school and community. Each award recipient was nominated by their peers as most deserving of being recognized for their commitment and dedication to students and to learning.

Joan Foulds and Ed Poropat won the Curricular Award, presented to staff who have established a stimulating learning environment and have the ability to arouse curiosity, promote independent learning and critical thought. Joan Foulds of Wilberforce and her co-teacher Ed Poropat at J.D. Hodgson Elementary School in Haliburton won this award for their innovative approach to team teaching.

Ann Varty of Haliburton won the Impact Award of Excellence that is presented to staff who have contributed significantly to the development of positive learning or the working environment. Ann taught English, drama, yearbook and peer tutoring for 25 years at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School. She presently is the board's program consultant working out of the Haliburton board office. Ann believes in life-long learning and constantly looks for challenges in the world of education.

Free Meningococcal C Immunization Clinics For Teens

Teens are at greater risk of becoming infected with invasive meningococcal disease. It's a serious and potentially fatal illness.

A teen can get meningococcal C disease from the saliva of an infected person. Infection is spread through kissing, sneezing or sharing water bottles, lipsticks and eating utensils.

Immunization can help to protect your teen! The following free clinics are being offered for Grade 7 students and youth 15 to 19 years old who have not been vaccinated.

Summer baseball's back

It was good to see children playing ball last Thursday evening at the ball park here. The younger children played T-Ball at 5:45 p.m. followed by the juniors enjoying softball at 6:30. The senior children began their softball play at 7:30.

There was lost of involvement with adults helping out making sure the kids had fun hitting, sunning, throwing and catching.

These games will continue on Thursday evenings. Call Ken Riley at 448-2864 for information about T-Ball and softball.

WE hear that Musical Sunday at the United Church was a joyous occasion. The choir was in good voice singing numbers including "Walk With Me" with Anne Dupuis doing solo parts. Attending the service were Bob and Lynn Gapes and Marlene White, friends of the Rev. Peter and Mrs. Robertson.

They were also friends of mine when we all lived in the Burlington/Oakville area and worked for the Halton Board of Education. Would have been great to see them.

It was great to see so many family members and friends at the celebration of nephew Ward and Gail Clark's 25th wedding anniversary last weekend in Enniskillen/Tyrone. The main event was Saturday evening, June 3, 2006 at the Tyrone Community Hall with lots of music, dancing, con-

Support the Courage of Women... Become a YWCA Volunteer!

The YWCA is seeking enthusiastic volunteers to act as home companions for a new program, YWCA HERS (Haliburton Emergency Rural SafeSpace). YWCA HERS is a service for women with and without children fleeing abusive relationships in Haliburton County where they will find safe refuge and support in a respectful, welcoming environment.

The YWCA HERS volunteers will be trained to be available as companions to the client and her children, monitor security systems, and be a reliable team member to the YWCA HERS program. The volunteers will be required to be scheduled during designated agreed upon hours, including weekends, evenings and holiday shifts.

"I used to think volunteering at the YWCA was only about helping others, and then I discovered it was about so much more...like friendship, enjoyment, and a commitment I can believe in!"

versation and food.

Among the close to two hundred attending were the Best Man Barry Stoughton of Hamilton but well known in Wilberforce, and the Maid of Honour Mona Weller of Philadelphia, sister of the bride. Long time friends Fran and Al who met while in the wedding party twenty-five years ago, and were wed the next year, were delighted to be part of the celebrations.

There were friends from workplaces of Ward and Gail, as well as life-long friends. Barry and Sharon Agnew of Oshawa, and Cathy Agnew of Wilberforce attended. Family included Ward and Gail's daughter Sara and Greg, and son Wade.

Also pleased to be a part of the family weekend were Linda and Terry Stamp, Brenda and Byron Kellar, Chris and Jamie Kellar, Teralyn and Elvin Phipps, Joan Clark, Manfred Stelter, Hilda Clark, Barry and Lisa McDonald and Colleen McDonald.

If a good time such as this is a good omen, then many more happy years are still ahead for Ward and Gail.

The "Move It" dance recitals were a big hit at the Lloyd Watson Centre on Sunday, June 4 with performances at 1 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. Performers are part of Jody McGurrin's Highland Grove Dance Centre and Apsley Dance. From beginners to advanced, dancers of all ages put on a good show indicating what great fun exercise, and creative outlet Jody's dancers, experience throughout their dance season.

Volunteers save the day

Canada Day will be celebrated after all

Thanks largely to the notice at the West Guilford Store on Wed., May 31, to the effect that our West Guilford Canada Day celebration would not occur unless people came to a meeting that night at the Centre, 14 people attended. The result is that it is going to happen.

Cheryl Nicholls chaired the meeting, stating that it would be her last time doing so. The Daniels, custodians of the centre, offered help. Others offered time to oversee races, produce prizes, or get in touch with people for advertising or oversee children's games. This enthusiastic support was the positive response needed.

My chief support involves phoning people to ask for homemade pies, so expect a call soon! Call Cheryl at 754-3210 if you can help – a job is sure to be there for you.

For about two weeks in May, Louise Cooper was one of eight women, mostly mothers and daughters, who travelled to France for a trip by barge down canals in Burgundy. Two days in Paris began the holiday which continued on the Seine River. Jen Maher was the other Guilford resident to travel in the group with her mother, Ann.

Our company for two days last week was a couple from Truro, N.S., Don and Doreen Hatt who tour from their home once a year in their camper home to visit Alberta or Ontario friends and relatives.

Phrona Sisson has been in hospital for several days lately. We wish her a sound and speedy recovery.

Ladies' Fellowship on June 1 at the Centre included men as their guests. Steve Smith, son of the Rev. John and Valma Smith, was speaker of the evening, and Bob English spoke of his work with emergency services in Haliburton County. Gospel music was provided by Lost & Found, the Guyatts from Hall's Lake.

Congratulations and best wishes to Colin Morrison and Shauna Sisson on their marriage on June 3, 2006.

P.S. Bill Marshall has not withdrawn from the Centre's Committee.

Learn what to do when you find an injured turtle

Field naturalists host speaker from Turtle Trauma Centre

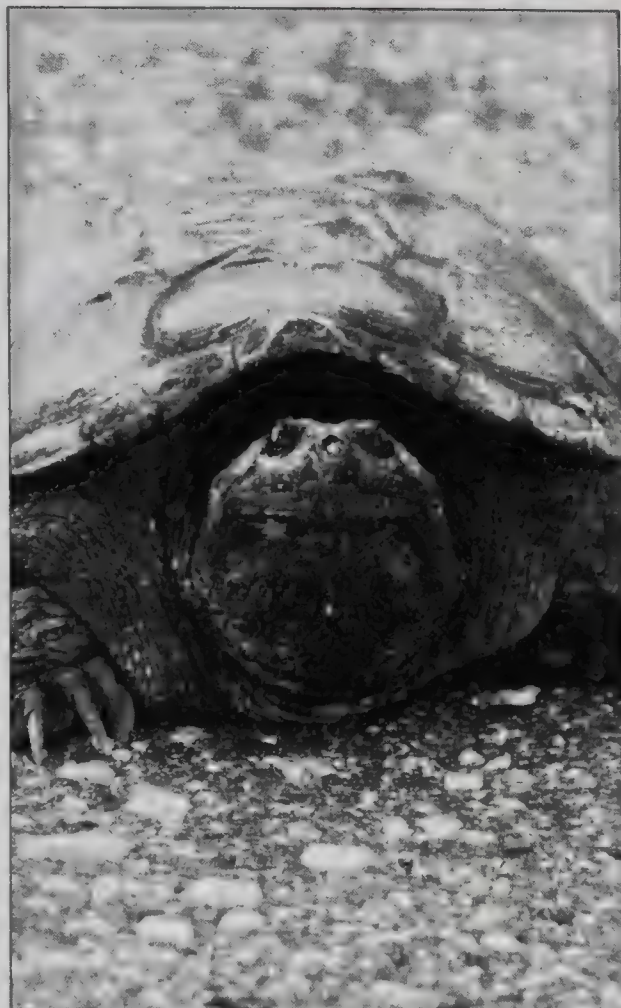

The Haliburton Highlands Field Naturalists will hold their regular monthly meeting at the Haliburton Highlands Museum on Tuesday, June 13 at 7:30 p.m..

The featured speaker will be from the Turtle Trauma Centre in Peterborough. It opened in June of 2002 and functions as a registered charity. Working closely with the Peterborough Zoo, the Centre takes in injured native turtles providing medical, surgical, and rehabilitative care to these fascinating creatures.

Many native species of turtles are in decline in Ontario making such rehabilitation work critical in the process of recovery. A multi-species recovery team is currently at work across Ontario providing co-ordinated help for turtles at risk. In their recently released publication they stressed the role of rehabilitation as a top priority.

Join the field naturalists on the 13th to hear more about this important work and to find out what steps you can take if you rescue an injured turtle on our county roadways.

They may not be cute and cuddly, but turtles need to be protected nonetheless. This is a particularly hazardous time of year for them as they lay their eggs on the soft shoulders of our county roads. Next Tuesday you can learn what to do if you come across an injured turtle.

Throw out your unsafe children's products and win

There are 'wanted' posters out for unsafe children's products as the round-up is on to make the community safer for its youngest citizens.

Local residents are encouraged to drop off unsafe child products at the first-ever Child Product Round-up Day being organized in Haliburton village. The event will ensure unsafe children's products such as baby walkers, cribs, older car seats, playpens, strollers, toys, helmets and other protective sports equipment are properly disposed of or destroyed.

The Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit and the Municipality of Dysart et al are organizing the Unsafe Child Product Round-up of Saturday June 10, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Village of Haliburton landfill.

Dysart residents are encouraged to drop off their unsafe child products at the event. People who drop do so at either event will automatically be entered in a draw to win a $100 gift certificate from Home Hardware.

Organizers say the event reduces the risk of children being hurt by unsafe items and protects adults from personal liability.

Baby walkers, for instance, were banned in Canada as of April 2004 because of the danger they posed to children.

"That's just one example," Andrew adds. "When you consider that injuries are the leading cause of death and disability for Canadian children, anything we can do to get unsafe items out of circulation is worth the effort."

For details call the local Health Unit office at 457-1391 or visit www.hkpr.on.ca.

Our hearts still ache with sadness, And secret tears still flow, For what it meant to lose you, No one will ever know. Each time we see your photo, You seem to smile and say, Don't cry, I'm only sleeping. We'll meet again someday. Your memory is our keepsake, With which we'll never part, God has you in his keeping. We have you in our heart. Forever loved, never forgotten and always in our hearts.
